Lord Frederick Hamilton, who will assist William Waldorf Astor in conducting "The Pail Mall 'Infatine," is known to most of the New-Yorkers who are in the habit of spending the season in London. He is a son of the Duke of Abercorn, one of whose daughters is Lady Elandfold, the first wife of the Duke of Mariborough, her divorce being granted before Lord Binndford came into his ducal title. It was supposed at one time, in London, at least, that Lord Frederick would marry Miss Beesle Greene, who spent last winter in New-York. Mass Greene was almost constantly with Lady Elandford, Lord Frederick/Hamilton was formerly in the Erittah diplomatiselvice. Some years say he made a visit to Baltimore, where he remained for some months.

The engagement is announced of Miss Mack, of this city, a daughter of John Mack, and a sister of Mrs. W. Bourke Cockran, to Enrico Mario Sesgnamile, of Naples, but for some time a resident of Baltimore, and a frequent visitor to New-York. Mr. Scagnamillo is of a musical family, and is himself a graduate of the Conservatory of Naples. Some years ago while travelling in Sonth America, at the selicitation of friends, he performed on the 'cello in Buenos Ayres in the presence of Juarez Celman, President of the Republic, who presented to him, as a token of appreciation, a scarfpin set with diamonds surrounding a large Mack peers.

The police heard nothing of the stab when it occurred. They were first informed of the affray late on Friday night when Joseph O'Mara Gray's barkeeper, went to the station in East Twenty-second-st., and said that Gray was in a critical condition. Gray said he had been stabled by Otto Nagel, a plane mover, of No. 514 East Seventeenth-st. According to the story told to the police, the men had quarreled abut a small debt which Nagel owed to the liquor-dealer. Gray was standing in front of his store about 6 a. m. on Wednesday, when he saw Nagel and dunned him for the money. There was a dispute, Gray said, and Nagel drew a knife and struck at him One blow was without effect, but at the second stroke the blade entered Gray's left side above the hip, inflicting a wound about three linehes deep. Gray fell to the sidewalk and Nagel ran away.

At the time Gray did not think he was hurt seri-

His route around a contract to deliver nity more lectures. His joint around the world his been made by R. S. Smythe, the Australian lecture manager who conducts the Stanley tour, and who controls the lyceum business in his country. Mr. Smythe has just arrived in San Francisco. He has exhausted the European field, and is now scarcing America for platform attractions. He will be the guest of Major J. B. Pond while in New-York.

Lieutenant R. E. Peary to now lecturing in Colorado. He has travelled and lectured twice 2 day since January 3, invariably to crowded houses. His alternoon lectures are attended largely by children and teachers, and in many of the cities public schools are dismissed in the middle of the day to give children and trachers an apportunity to attend the lecture. Lieutenant Prary is doing this for the purpose of rising the means to fit out his next Arctic expedition, which will leave New-York about the middle of June. Mrs. Peary accompanies her husband on his present tour. Lieutenant Peary has six weeks more of time "booked" for two lectures a day, closing April 29 in Harlem, when he will have given 10; lectures in 102 drys. The tour has been under the personal direction of Major Pond.

When the embalming process was completed on Friday evening the features of the dead man were strikingly natural in their appearance, for he had died in the apparent fulness of health, and the face bore no signs of contortion from pain and no trace of acute or insidious disease. A dead-mask was successfully taken by a well-known sculptor.

The funeral arrangements contemplate a public service in the Rev. Dr. John Hall's Church on Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock. The body will then be taken privately to New-Dorp, Staten Island, and placed in the Vanderbilt vault there.

Dr. W. seward Webb, a brother-in-law of Mrs. shepard, had planned a trip for himself and some in vited guests to the southwest as far as Mexico, along the Southern California coast northward along the racific shores to Vancouver, whence, after a possible cruise in that neighborhood, the return journey was o be made by way of the Great Northern and the Canadian Pacific railroads. The train of six parlor cars stood in the Grand Central Station yesterday morning, for that was the date on which planned to leave this city. The death of Colonel Shepard rendered a postponement necessary, and the start will not be made until some time after the funeral. The body of Colonel Shepard lies in the room in which he died. The curtains of the house are tightly drawn. The entrance is in Pfity-second-st. The storm-doors have not yet been removed; passer-by along the street cannot see the heavy streamer of crape which is fastened to the bell-knob of the inner door. Before I o'clock yesterday over 200 cards had been left at the house, but few callers were admitted beyond the vestibule.

There was much speculative talk yesterday as to the probable future of "The Mail and Expresa" newspaper. It is said that Colonel Shepard owner the entire stock as well as the building just completed at No. 203 Broadway. It is said that the property pose of it by will is unquestioned. There is no secret about the fact that the Vanderbilt family have not favored the ownership of a newspaper by any one so closely identified with their domestic circle. One belief expressed is that Colonel Shepard has provided a trust for the conduct of the paper in the future management to the hands of his son, Elliott F. Shepard, jr., if the latter should develop a tast for this class of work. Unless some such provision is found to exist in Colonel Shepard's will, therefore purchaser for the property. He was removed to his home in Parkave, and a physician was called to attend him there. Dr. Swan, of East Eighteenthset, saw Gray on Friday, and thought that an injury to the intestine had been caused by the knife and that there was danger of peritonitis.

When the police were told of the case on Friday night, Detective Timoney was sent to arrest Nagel, who was found in bed at his home at a late hour. Nagel admitted that he had quarreled with Gray, but denied that he had stabbed him. He was taken to Gray's home where he was identified by the wounded man. At sight of the prisoner Gray studdered and said:

"He stabbed me, but take him away."

PHYSICIANS DISCUSS THE CASE. COLONIL SHEPARD'S DEATH, THEY SAY, WAS

A REMARKABLE ONE. peculiar conditions under which Colonel Elitott

F. Shepard died have aroused considerable interest among the physicians of this city, and they are anantmons in saying that from a medical point of view Colonel Shepard's death will go on record as a remarkable and exceptional case. "Oedema of the langs," said one of the leading physicians of the city to a Tribane reperier last night, "is nothing more than dropsy of the lungs. The lungs become water-soaked and this closes the air cells. In Colonel Shepard's case the ether probably caused the water in the lungs to obstruct the air passages and then, in the lengs to observe the an appear of course, suffocation followed. When oedema occurs in cases where ether has been administered it denotes a weakness of some vital organ and nothing that medical science can do will save the patient. If an autopsy is performed on Colonel Shepard's body it may be found that oedema was not the real cause of his death, but an obstruction of blood in one of the valves of the heart caused by the ether." Dr. McBurney said hist night that he had just heard some one say that Colonel Shepard had Bright's dis-"If that was so," said Dr. McBurney, administering of other to him would have been fatal on that account, but Dr. McLane and myself found no evidence of Bright's disease, and I am certain that ione of Colonel Shepard's vital organs were affected before the ether was given. We made a careful ex-amination of the heart and found its action normal. I said we found no evidence of Eright's disease, but sometimes a man may have that trouble and yet it s impossible to discover any evidence of it. satisfied, however, that Colonel Shepard died from dropsy of the lungs. His labered breathing and signs of choking leave no other conclusion. It is the only case of the kind that I know of, although there have been cases cited in the medical works. The ether, you know, in such cases, causes the lungs to fill with water and the air chambers become closed, and then suffocation takes place. A peculiar thing about Colo-nel Shepard's case was that such a small amount of ether was responsible for his death. He had made but one inhalation when we noticed that he was suffering from shortness of breath and choking. These symptoms are not unusual, but never last more than afteen seconds. With the Colonel, however, they continued beyond this time, and then we began to use resteratives. It was some time before we succeeded in bringing him to consciousness, and even then he knew almost nothing. He made a few remarks that we could not understand and soon lapsed into his previous condition. It would be of interest to the medical profession if an autopsy were made, but the family have expressed an unwillingness to have it."

further than to say that it was a most unusual and extraordinary one, and would be of considerable in-terest to physicians and surgeons all over the world, from the fact that Colonel Shepard's vital organs were supposed to be in a sound condition. He expressed great confidence in Drs. McBurney and McLane, and

WHAT WILL THE FUTURE OF "THE MAIL AND EXPRESS" BE!

The sudden death of Colonel Elliott F. Shepard on Friday internoon, characterized as it was by universally and, indeed, remarkably dramatic and pahetic accompaniments, was freely talked about yeserday in all business circles. There was something dartling in the fact that a man of such spiendid physical appearance, and apparently in the enjoyment of experts the paths about the case, said that he was afruid that the many deaths that had recently occurred of the many deaths that had a content of the many deaths that had recently occurred of the many deaths that had a near death was death was due to the many deaths. It was said at the Shepard house last night that no autopsy would be performed on Colonel shepard's body, and that the Coroner, who had consulted with Drs. McBurney and McLane, was satisfied that no further investigation would be necessary.

GIFTED, GENEROUS, INDUSTRIOUS.

From The Mail and Express. Ellist F. Shepard had many claims upon pu consideration and admiration, as he confessedly upon the private affection of those admitted into inner circle of his intimate friendship and confic inner circle of his intimate friendship and confidential intercourse. He was a gifted man, possessing rare qualities, both of mind and heart. He was endowed with the power both of acute and accurate perception. He had a wonderful resource of suggestion and origination. He was prenounced in his religious and political predictions. But he was just as intense in his emotions of generosity and magnanimity; just as ardent in his affections, and just as sincere and strong in his sympathies.

His happiest moments seemed to be when he was devoting himself to some work in which he conceived there was a great moral interest and value. When so engaged, who ever saw his courage flag, his faith fail, or his spirit and purpose falter? His was an unwearded and joyful industry. He seemed there was a great moral interest and value. Vso engaged, who ever saw his couringe flag, faith fail, or his spirit and purpose falter? was an unwearled and joyful industry. He see to have a profound and practical insight into beauty and emphasis of that exquisite couplet:

An angel's wing would droop, if long at rest, And God Himself, inactive, were no longer tiest.

THE STUDENTS MOVEMENT.

ITS FIRST ANNIVERSARY RECEPTION.

SPEECHES MADE AT THE CLUBHOUSE BY BISHOP POTTER AND OTHERS.

first anniversary reception of the Students' Movement was held at the house of the Students' Club, No. 136 Lexington-ave., yesterday afternoon and evening. The Movement aims to establish an intercollegiate tie between the different institution of the higher learning in this city-between the 15. 000 students in the twenty-six colleges and by influence of this tie to counteract the demoralizing influences which abound in a large city. The work was begun twenty-five years ago by the Young Men's Christian Association; but only a year ago had th Movement gained sufficient importance and support to justify the securing of a clubhouse. It was as a celebration of the anniversary of this that the reeption was given vesterday.

The home of the Students' Club was throughd from 4 until 11 p. m. with members of the Movement and friends. Ex-President Bainbridge confined his remarks to the work of the Movement-what it had done and what was hoped for the future. He said the work had been know under its present name since 1887, when Professor Henry Drummond aroused such enthusiasm in the cause by his addresses in this city, that the work, which had originally taken in only medical students, was enlarged to include all students of the city. Since with remarkable rapidity. He spoke of the many pleasant social gatherings which had taken place at the club, and said that the building was bringing prominence, permanence, popularity, dignity and readth of scope to the work.

James W. Alexander made a few brief though ineresting remarks. He thought there was a great field for the work. There was much to be done in New-York in bringing the younger college men gether under good influences. "I am and always have been," he said, "the friend of the student. Educational movements of all kinds have interested me, especially where they have had a definite aim. The Students' Movement has this definite aim, and it ought to incite interest because it interests educated people.

The people of New York should take hold of the work, and, putting their hands in their pockets, give the

He spoke of a visit he had made while in Paris to a clubhouse which had nims and objects similar to the students' which had nims and objects similar to the students' Movement. He had been deeply impressed by the good such an institution did in helping young people away from home in the quest of knowledge to gain their erds; he was pleased to mention (it was the first time it had ever been mentioned publicly, he said) the name of the person to whose generasity and benevolence the Patis club owed its origin and support; it was a woman-Mrs. Whitelaw Reid, "The New York Movement," he said, "needs such support and encouragement, and it ought to have it.

In the evening addresses were made by Freeman C. Ward, president of the Sudents' Movement; and the Rev. William H. P. Faunce, pastor of the Fifth Avenue Baptist Church. The Columbia Glee Club sang, and selections by Mr. and Mrs. Gerrit smith. Mrs. Dyett, and Miss Taylor, added to the enjoyment of the evening.

It is known that a strong personal friendship exists between Colonel Wilson and the President. After Mr. Cleveland's re-election it was stated that Colonel Wilson would be ordered to Washington and placed in charge of the public buildings and grounds, a place which he held during Mr. Cleveland's first Administration; and that when a vacancy occurred he would receive promotion over the heads of older officers. Lieutenant Colonel Wilson is heads of older olders. Such a stath on the list for promotion to the rank of colonel, and there are seventy seven officers who stand between him and the brigadier-generalship, unless the President and a Democratic Senate see fit to promote him to it.

THEODORE WELD STERLING.

Theodore Weld Sterling, who died from erysipelas after a short illness in Paris on March 21, left this country only four weeks ago, apparently in good health. He leaves a wife, formerly Miss Susie Devlin Price, of St. Louis, a niece of Mrs. John F. Dillon, of this city; an infant son, a brother, John M. Sterling, of Cleveland, and three sisters—Mrs. Albert G. Lawrence, of Stockbridge, Mass.; Mrs. Thomas P. Rossiter and Mrs. George Buckham, of this city. He was born in Cleveland, Ohio, in 1837. In St. Louis he carried on a successful business for many years, and was a man of influence in that city. He also a number of years in New-York, and intended to return to this city next fail. Mr. Sterling was a member of the Ohio Society, the Union League and Lotes ciubs, and had many friends in those organizations. He was successful in many undertakings, but the mere achievement of success had little value in his eyes, save as it served as a means to the accomplishment of better and higher things. to his means he gave largely. His sympathies were always active in behalf of the deserving, and were easily enlisted in a praiseworthy cause. His charity, however, was unobtrusive, and few persons knew of dowever, was unconfusive, and few persons knew of his many acts of benevolence. He won admiration on his unfluching adherence to principle and by his rugged honesty. He was a man of great business ability. His death is a heavy loss to his family, relatives and friends.
